WAIT TILL KAISER SEES THESE FIGURES

JANESVILLE NOW HAS $1,200,000 WITH ONE DAY LEFT OF CAMPAIGN—TEAMS WORKING IN COUNTRY TODAY.

COUNTY "OVER TOP"

Rock County Over-subscribers Her Quota and is Given Fourth Place in State—Campaign Closes Tomorrow.

ALREADY SUBSCRIBED $1,200,000
JANESVILLE'S QUOTA $1,000,000
OVER-SUBSCRIBED $ 200,000

Janesville's total in the Fourth Liberty Loan has reached $1,200,000, an over-subscription of $100,000, and the campaign is still in progress. Refusing to quit until the very last minute the campaign workers are securing the city for subscriptions, and it is estimated that within a few days the figures are tabulated that Janesville will be well over the top.

Four teams left headquarters early this morning for a day's work in the country. The teams are working in the towns of Center, La Prairie, Johnston and Janesville. Unusual success is being reported by the salesmen in the rural districts.

Rock county is over the top and now ranks fourth in the state. This announcement was given out this morning by M. J. Jeffers, chairman of the Rock county committee. The quota set for Rock county was $2,971,000, and the amount already subscribed is $3,058,750. The percentage given by the county is 102.94.

Rock has again demonstrated beyond all doubt that it is one of the best cities in the state. Every city and township in Rock county will be over the top and over-subscribe their quota. There is not a slacker city or township in the county. The record made by this county and also by the city of Janesville is an enviable one and one to be proud of.

At the shops of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad at South Janesville sixty-four men have taken bonds averaging $150 to each man. The spirit shown by the men at the South Janesville shops is excellent and they have co-operated with the local workers in every way possible.

T. A. Blackburn, manager of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance company in this city, announced this morning that he had been authorized by his company to purchase $15,000 worth of bonds in this city. The announcement, coming as it did at this late hour, caused a great deal of bliss at the headquarters and it will help greatly to boost the final figures in this city.

SETS DATE FOR THE CALLING OF SELECTS

The announcement from Washington that draft calls for men who have passed their thirty-seventh birthdays are expected to begin about March 1, will be learned with interest by Rock county residents who come within that classification.

Plans for bringing the older class of new registrants into camp have not been completed, but the approximate date of the first call was disclosed on Wednesday by publication of testimony by President General Crowder before the house military committee.

In all, Gen. Crowder told the committee, 2,399,000 newly registered men between 18 and 45 will be called before July 1 and of that number more than 2,000,000 will be physically fit fighting men. The calls for general service will be divided as follows: October, 245,000; November, 204,000; December, 197,500; January, 147,500; February, 244,000; March, April, May and June, 344,000 each month. These men will supply both the army and navy and the marine corps.

In addition, 20,000 men for limited service will be called for each month. Gen. Crowder said the work of classifying new registrants should be completed by Jan. 1.

In commenting on Swenson's resignation, Gov. Philipp said he wished to publicly thank Mr. Swenson for his services and that he was willing to relieve him of his defense council duties in order that he may devote his entire time to the increasing work of the state food administrator.

CHICAGO MARKETS.

Chicago, Oct. 18.—Eastern feeders came to the relief of a stagnant cattle market. Pennsylvania taking 800@900 lb. stock at $9.50@11.

Influenza has been partly responsible for recent stagnation, but the country has been in a state of peace and slump and is recovering courage, assurance that beef will be wanted regardless of military developments being accepted.

Quality was the poorest of the season, about half a dozen loads of good cattle being found in a run of 15,000.

An impression exists that low spot for the season was uncovered this week. Most of the western beef has been marketed and while a lot of trash is on the horizon, good cattle will take care of themselves.

An advance of $1 per cwt. at this juncture would do much toward stimulating winter beef making.

Hogs broke 15@25c, closing on the bottom. A speculator paid $18.65, but $18.50 took the best late in the session.

Heavy packers not being salable at $16.25@16.50.

A bargain sale of female cattle that has been in progress at every stock sale in the country will close the moment Western stock ceases.

Retail Prices High.

This bargain sale has put considerable money into the pockets of those who pass the product along to the consumer, as retail prices are radically out of line with values on the hog.

The entire Western grazing region has been unloading cows and as the beef they furnish is not eligible to government contracts they sell at a stiff discount.

Cow trade is dead. None are being killed at Chicago, a few arrivals being forwarded to Kansas City. Common sheep and light lambs are too plentiful to give good meat a standing in the dressed market.

Big Sheep Run Expected.

About 200,000 sheep transferred last spring from various sections of the range to cut over areas in Michigan and Wisconsin will be marketed during the next thirty days. The experiment is understood to have given satisfactory results and will be repeated next year.

About 35,000 cattle arrived, of which 2,000 were westerns. Values were 10@25c higher, the improvements extending to culling cows. Feeders advanced 25@40c on good country buying.

Choice to prime steers 18.25@19.40. Good to choice steers 16.00@18.25.

Medium to good steers 14.00@16.00. Fair to medium steers 11.00@14.25.

Common to fair steers 7.50@11.00. Stockers and feeders 7.50@11.75.

Good to choice cows 7.25@11.25. Fair to good cows 7.25@8.25.

Canners and cutters 5.75@7.00. Fat and bologna bulls 8.00@11.00.

Good to choice calves 16.00@16.50. A run of 21,000 hogs was extensive.

About 10,000 being carried over. A $16.65 top was scratching the same kind selling at $16.50.

Good to choice medium 18.40@18.55. Choice to bacon weights 18.25@19.60.

Good to choice heavy 18.30@19.60. Good to prime mixed 18.00@18.25.

Good to choice mixed 17.50@18.00. Good medium packing 17.00@17.25.

Common heavy packing 16.25@16.50. Live mutton trade was stagnant.

At a late hour much of the crop had not been sold although supply was up to 30,000. The best bid on Western lambs was $16.75, the bulk selling at $14.50@15.50, with feeder grades at $12@13.50.

Good to choice lambs 15.25@15.75. Fair to good lambs 13.75@16.25.

Common to fair lambs 10.50@13.75. Good to choice ewes 9.25@10.25.

Feeding lambing ewes 7.50@11.25. Good to choice wethers 10.50@11.00.

Feeding sheep 8.50@10.00. Breeding ewes 11.00@16.00.

Popular Janesville Young Man Left This Morning For Chicago To Enter Training For Red Cross Driver

Bob Dailey has gone to war, and not the same time at least will the people of Janesville stand and sing "Over There" led by Bob. Bob has won a place in the hearts of all Janesville people and old, and he will be greatly missed.

After many futile attempts to enter the service, Bob was finally awarded. Yesterday afternoon he received word from Chicago to report immediately for training as a Red Cross Ambulance driver. He left this morning for the city where he entered training ranging in period from one to three weeks, and then to Europe.

While in this city, Mr. Dailey was engaged as manager of the Myers Hotel, and probably no popular fellow has left the city since the outbreak of the war.

WHO'S WHO in the Daily News

LIEUT. CHAS. E. HUGHES, JR.
Lieut. Charles E. Hughes, Jr., will have more claim to fame than that which would accrue to him from becoming a son of his father (who is, of course, ex-Governor Hughes of New York, and Republican candidate for president of the United States in 1916).

C. E. Hughes, Jr.

Lieut. Hughes is an artillery officer, and he has just sailed for France. His duties on the other side will not take him immediately to the trenches, as he has been selected as instructor at the artillery school at Saumur.

Lieut. Hughes is 23. He is married and has two children, boys of 5 and 3 years of age.

JANESVILLE SOLDIER WRITES FROM FRANCE

A letter received from Edwin Bartlett, who is attending an officer's school "somewhere in France" He went across in Co. M, and has seen some fighting while there. He was a member of the Bowler City Band. The letter follows:

"Having a few moments to myself, I am going to make myself useful. I am working harder, every day, and I want to tell you that the good word from home, is the medicine which puts the pep in the boys.

I had the opportunity to sit in and play at a concert the other evening, and it was a real glorious event for me. I was rather bum, but I got by real well and was asked to enter the musical organization. No doubt that you are aware of the fact that the bands have been made larger now.

There are many good organizations but our old bunch could surpass anything for its size that I ever met with during my travels. The city of Janesville ought to be even prouder than she is of the "Bowler City" and I hope they will wake up some day.

"I suppose the season of 'music' has just about passed, and I do hope that I have the chance to play the next fair, at home. The good rules of the censor are very strict, so I will not take any chances on the war proposition. The boys will cause many a laugh in the time to come.

Give my regards to all the boys, and I would like to hear from each one. I could write more but must cease to overwork the censor. With best wishes and good luck.

Sincerely,
"Doc" Bartlett."

The flusher arrived in the city Wednesday afternoon and was given a thorough try-out on Wednesday evening in the presence of the aldermen and the mayor. The new machine was found to be satisfactory in every respect and will undoubtedly be accepted by the council at their meeting on Monday evening.

The demonstration tomorrow afternoon is for the purpose of acquainting the people of Janesville with the workings of the new machine. Owing to the lateness of the season it is not known as yet whether the new flusher will be put into operation at once or stored until next season. This matter will also be decided at the council meeting on Monday evening.

EXTENSIVE PLANS MADE BY BUREAU

United States Employment Bureau Making Extensive Plans for Business in Janesville.

The traveling representative of the U. S. division of the Bureau of Labor in Janesville, Miss Griesser of Milwaukee, was in the city yesterday in consultation with those in charge of the local bureau, in regard to matters of interest in regard to labor conditions. She has been on a tour through out the state and has many interesting things to say of the way the world is changing. They are ventering airplanes in Oshkosh, are working on Monitor tractors at Watertown, and even in the city have donned overalls and are running machines formerly operated by men. The force of them are working in the machine shops at Beloit, and are making good. Whenever they go into these industries, many safe guards must be put in to prevent accidents, as the laws in Wisconsin are very strict in regard to the employment of women and children. There is also some freak legislation, according to Miss Griesser, which interferes in many ways in securing the best results, and these will be modified, to make them practicable.

Miss Mary E. Sheridan in charge of the Women's Division of the local bureau, is a Janesville girl, having obtained her education in the schools here, later attending at business college for a course in that line. She has taken a civil service examination for the women and later expects to go to Milwaukee on some other center and take special training. She enjoys the work very much and sees wonderful possibilities along its line.

The local office has made extensive plans for changes in its office, where there will be a separate room for ladies and for men. This is in accordance with a state law governing these places. There are about thirty of these employment agencies in the state, each with many smaller community labor boards in its district. There are large centers at Milwaukee where workers are trained, and where general instructions are formulated.

Although these agencies have been started they have been found wonderfully efficient, as they bring the employer and employee in close touch, being operated by the United States Government is assured of good faith in every transaction.

Your milk check is ready for you at the end of the month when you do business with the Universal. You are taking no loss of time in getting your milk when you send your milk to us. We want 20,000 pounds of milk daily and are willing to pay high for it. The Universal Creamery Company.

LABOR BUREAU MAKES SURVEY OF FACTORIES

Surveying every store and factory in the city of Janesville has been the work of the United States Employment Bureau in Janesville, since the past week. Under the direction of James DeWane, senior examiner in charge, the work was begun last Monday and will be finished by the end of this week. Every factory or store containing men or women employees was visited and a classification made of all industries and occupations. At the completion of the survey the results will be classified and placed on file. By the means of the survey, men who are not in an essential work may be released and placed in an essential one or war work. Along with the survey of Janesville, the bureau will also take in the northern part of Wisconsin county, which territory was recently placed in this district. The work of surveying the towns in that district will begin next week, so that the labor bureau presents a very busy place at the present time.

Miss Marjorie Griesser, of Milwaukee, traveling examiner for the female division in the state of Wisconsin, was in the city Thursday and Friday making an examination of the office and explaining much of the details of the work of the bureau, employing women this morning.

The financial reliability of the Universal Creamery Company is unquestioned. It is no fly-by-night concern. Farmers dealing with us will get their money. We are here to stay and want more milk. Paying top prices now.

News Notes from Movieland

BY DAISY DEAN

It must be nice to be a photoplay actress and have a director for a husband, or it must be nice still to be a photoplay director and have a beautiful and talented actress for a wife. Such is the case in the Tucker family. George Ivan Tucker, the famous director who built from Chicago is the lucky man and Elizabeth Riden, who rose to fame on the English stage, is the lucky wife.

Miss Riden is very well known. Indeed, in English theatricals, she played in Bernard Shaw's drama, "Fanny's First Play," which had a year's run at the Comedy theater in New York. She appeared in "Lord Dunsany's 'Gods of the Mountain'" in "Presenting Mr. Fanny," under the personal direction of Fanny and then she entered the studio.

It was none other than Hal Caine himself who suggested that she act for the camera. And so it was not unusual that she should be the one to play Kate in the popularization of his book "The Stanxman." "Mother" in which the beautiful Miss Riden was lost in the character of the old woman was a disappointment to many of her admirers and "Fanny's First Play" is the third of the plays screened by this accomplished young actress and her director husband.

She has appeared in many English photoplays which were mediocre and for some time past has been rather inactive. The latest reports have it that she is to resume her screen work shortly under the direction of her husband and that she will not play "mother's" parts any more, at least for some time.

GOSSIP

William Fox has signed Evelyn Nesbit for a series of five film productions which the Fox company itself declares will surpass anything in the history of motion picture industry for powerful drama, human appeal, and lavish settings. Inasmuch as little mention is made of Miss Nesbit's abilities as an actress, the speculation intrudes that Fox may have signed Evelyn Nesbit not so much for her good work in "Redemption" as in recognition of the fact that her name was once Evelyn Nesbit Thaw.

PATENTS TO INVENTORS.

Richard S. C. Caldwell, solicitor of patents, 316 Majestic building, Milwaukee, reports patents recently issued to Wisconsin inventors as follows: A. N. Allen, Green Bay, water trough; O. H. Hasty, Elgin, Ill., and H. A. Atwood, Milwaukee, chair; T. H. Jacob, Wausau, supplemental axle for automobile; Claude Johnson, Phillips, operating means for saw-carriages; G. T. Johnson, Beloit, saw structure; H. P. Johnson, Racine, rim expander; J. W. Larnmore, Portville, water motor and dam; ELMER J. MANNING, Janesville, atomizer; R. G. Marquardt, Milwaukee, mattress-spring; C. G. W. Nitz, Wauwatosa, candy puller; Amanda Oberg, Hager City, bottle-stopper; S. Reiff, Beaver Dam, paste-appealing machine; A. Convention Postponed.

Tales of the Friendly Forest

You remember in the last story that the brave Yellow Dog Tramp went in and it was a mighty good thing for him just as soon as the old gentleman rabbit left the Briar Patch, after leaving Billy Bunny there, who should jump out from behind a tree but the wicked witch cat, and the dear old man. Didn't her eyes look fierce, and didn't her claws look long, and didn't her mouth look red and her teeth white? And if you can think of anything worse at night than a wildcat's face, please tell me, for I'd like to know if there is anything that really can scare brave old Uncle Lucky.

"Stop or I'll let one of your rubber tires," screamed the Wicked Wildcat, and she took hold with her teeth. And then what do you think that brave Yellow Dog Tramp did? No, he leaped out of the automobile and hit that wildcat on the head with a monkey wrench, and that wildcat saw three million five hundred and sixty-seven thousand nine hundred and ninety-nine and a half stars and then she rolled over on the snow and began to cry, and then the tire which she had bitten burst and all the air came out—oh dear me, now I'm saying something which isn't true, for the Snowmobile had runners, you know, and not wheels. So how could she come out of the tire? No, sir, that wasn't what happened at all. It was this way. The old gentleman rabbit got out the air pump and blew snow all over that wildcat till she was covered with it high as the Old Snake Fence and it took her all night to dig herself out.

Well, after that Uncle Lucky started home but just before he reached the corner of Lettuce avenue and Carrot street he came across the Policeman Dog, and when he saw the Yellow Dog Tramp, he shouted: "Stop the car!" and this made Uncle Lucky angry, for he knew that Policeman Dog wanted to arrest the Yellow Dog Tramp. So Uncle Lucky told the Snowmobile to stop, and the Policeman Dog's whistle fell out of his mouth.

"That is very kind of you," said the Yellow Dog Tramp, and he began to bark, and just then a little deer came by.

"Can you tell me if Santa Claus is around? I have a brother who helps him with his sleigh and I want to see him."

"I guess you're too late, my little deer," said Uncle Lucky. "Xmas is over and Santa Claus won't come again for another year, and then the little deer began to cry: "Oh, dear, it is so long to wait till Xmas comes around. What shall I do when the time when Xmas bells will sound. "Jump into my Snowmobile," said kind Uncle Lucky. "You come home with us. I have a little barn right next to my garage where it is nice and warm. You shall have some hay to eat." So the little deer jumped into the Snowmobile and the kind old gentleman rabbit took him home, and in the next story you shall hear what happened to that little reindeer.

CAMPHOR COST SENT SOARING BY EPIDEMIC

Just when camphor is most in demand for the treatment and prevention of Spanish influenza the price of the drug is increasing rapidly. Since October 3 gum camphor has risen in the wholesale market from $1.75 to $2.50 and $2.75 a pound. There has been a commensurate advance in retail stores in the price of the gum and of spirits of camphor. Camphor used to be one of the cheapest of all medicinal compounds.

The rise is not due, it is claimed, to the temporarily increased use of camphor by doctors and their patients, but to the cutting off of the supply by war time conditions. Most of the camphor has been imported here from Japan. For some time none of it has reached the wholesalers.

The use of camphor as the old fashioned remedy for colds and the "grip" has been recommended in many letters to the press recently. One of the letter writers said that a small piece of the gum worn in a bag on the chest was a fine preventative.

FIRE DEPARTMENT IS CALLED OUT TWICE

The fire department was called out yesterday afternoon to a blaze at the Thoroughgood Box Co., on N. Main street. Shavings running through a street from a room on the upper floor to the furnace caught fire. At first it threatened to become serious, but was extinguished with one line of hose. No damage was done.

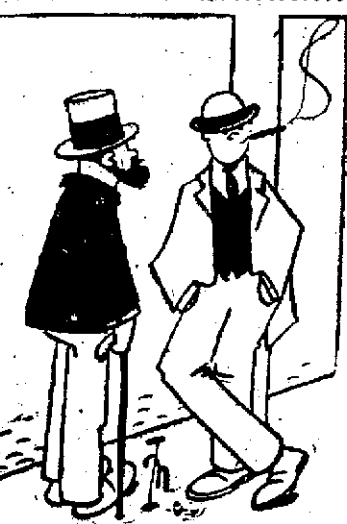

At five o'clock yesterday afternoon the men were again called out to a small blaze at the corner of River and School streets. No damage was done, a few shingles, only catching fire.

SPANISH INFLUENZA INCREASING IN CITY

MANY NEW CASES REPORTED TO CITY HEALTH OFFICER BUCKMASTER ON THURSDAY—TOTAL NOW 382.

Rockford Young Ladies Startle Local People When They Appear on Street Wearing Gauze Masks.

Total Cases in City 382

Spanish influenza is spreading in Janesville and the citizens are urged to use every precaution possible to guard against the spread of the disease. Dr. Buckmaster, city health officer, stated this morning that there are over three hundred cases in the city at the present time.

He also urges that the citizens remain calm and not become alarmed.

GIRLS WEAR MASKS.

Two young ladies stepping from the nine o'clock interurban this morning startled the downtown shoppers when they appeared on the street both wearing gauze masks. The young ladies were enroute from Rockford to Madison.

Not desiring any publicity, but simply guarding their health the young ladies refused to give their names to a reporter. However, they stated that they had been wearing the masks for several days and found them to be excellent preventatives against Spanish influenza.

over the situation. The number of deaths in the city has decreased during the past few days and only two deaths from the disease were reported today.

It is thought by the physicians in the city that the epidemic is at its height here and that it will show a decrease within the next few days. However, every precaution should be taken by the people against the spread of the disease. There is nothing to indicate that the disease is going to continue to spread and it is expected that a marked decrease will be evident.

dent within a very short time. People are warned not to congregate on the streets or to loiter in public places. Dr. Buckmaster also stated that one of the greatest dangers in spreading the disease is for people to cough or sneeze openly while on the street. Citizens are urged to guard against this practice at all times. Every doctor and nurse in the city is working night and day combating the disease and it was stated this morning that while there is not a great demand for outside nurses, a few could be used.

Dr. Buckmaster stated that it was imperative that the people do not become alarmed over the situation. There is no cause for the citizens to become panic-stricken as the situation is well in hand in Janesville.

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MRS. THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have received your letter of the 10th inst. and am glad to hear that you are well. I am sure that you will find the following suggestions helpful.

DAILY READERS. Some time ago I heard of putting the needle between the teeth when peeling onions and it proved to be a very effective remedy.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a woman in the business world and I am very successful for a woman. My mother is living and we are very happy together.

Do not marry the man feeling as if you are living the life of a successful business woman that married to a man whom you do not love and hate some of the

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am very much troubled with blackheads and with little pimples which seem to grow around the blackheads. What can I do for this?

To cure blackheads make an ointment of one ounce of soap liniment and one ounce of ether; mix.

For pimples that appear with blackheads make an ointment of two grains of beta naphthol, 20 grains of sulphur precipitate and 20 grains of potentilla. Rub over the pimples at night.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl 13 years old. I have been going with a boy four months and think a great deal of him and he seems to think a lot of me. His sister is going to have a party and I am invited. I don't know any of the family, as I have met her. Would it be proper for me to go?

Yes, it will be all right for you to go.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: We are quite a large family and have a nice home but I would like to know why they don't treat me the way they do the rest of the family.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) Is here any need for announcements to be sent out after a couple is married? (2) Are they sent just to receive presents?

(1) Announcements are not required, but they are a convenient way to notify friends of the marriage.

(2) No. An announcement does not require a present, or even hint for one.

(3) The woman.

STICK TO THE JOB YOU'VE GOT

"I'm going to quit," said Dan McGann, when the evening whistle blew.

"What's wrong?" the foreman asked of Dan, with a strange look in his face.

"Nothing at all," said Dan McGann, "but I've found another place."

"I'm going to work in another shop and stand at another drill; I've got a friend that has asked me down to work at the other mill. I've no complaint at my treatment here, you've always used me fine, and the only reason I'm changing jobs is to help out a friend of mine."

"Do you know what it means when foreman then to Dan, 'You are hurting the boys that fight in France, and helpin' the Hun, you are hinderin' two machines that ought to run at their fastest speed.'"

"Would you like us to wire the boys in France to stand for a day or two. For the shells they need while we find a man to work in the place of you?"

"We'll forget the money an' time, my boy, that making the change will cost."

"But while you're movin' from place to place it's life that is being lost."

"I'll stick where I am," said Dan McGann, "I'll stay till the war is done."

It shall never be said that I stopped one shell on its way to the dirty Hun.

An' I'll print this sign for the boys to read. Perhaps it will help a lot.

"To win the war in the quickest way, just stick to the job you've got."

CAULIFLOWER DISHES.

Cauliflower au Gratin—Place flowerets in a baking dish, after washing, pick over and wash and sprinkle with salt, pepper and a very little curried powder (if curried is liked). Over this pour a cup of white sauce, to which has been added one-quarter of a cup of grated cheese and half a cup of bread crumbs. Dot with butter, put in an oven and bake until brown.

Escalloped Cauliflower is prepared as above without the cheese.

Cauliflower and Beans—Cauliflower and butter beans are a combination liked by many. Boil beans until tender, add cooked cauliflower and proceed as for escalloped cauliflower.

TRIED RECIPES.

Grapes and Sugar (sugar)—Pick grapes and stem. Use as many grapes as you wish, but use them in this proportion: Take two cups of grapes to one of sugar. Do not wash grapes over night. In the morning add as they start to boil, time them, and boil only 20 minutes. Take from the stove, put in a sieve and rub all you can through. Put in glasses and put perfume over the top.

Barley Flour Pancakes With Yeast—Soak a yeast cake in a quart of lukewarm water, then add one teaspoon salt, one tablespoon sugar or syrup, one cup wheat flour, one-half cup cornmeal and barley flour enough to make a rather stiff batter. Let rise over night. In the morning add a teaspoon of soda which has been dissolved in one-fourth cup of boiling water. Bake the same as buckwheat cakes.

Warming Fruit Cake—One cup dried or fresh sweet apples chopped fine. (If dried apples are used, soak over night before chopping.) One cup cooking molasses (cool apples in one-half of the molasses until tender); one-half cup sugar or two-thirds cup corn syrup, one-third cup shortening, one-half cup sour milk, one large egg, one-half cup flour, one teaspoon baking powder sifted in flour. The oat flour may be made by grinding oat flakes in the food chopper or meat grinder. This makes two medium sized cakes.

Chocolate Loaf Cake—One cup sugar and one-half cup sugar creamed, two eggs well beaten, three-quarters cup sweet milk, two cups flour, one teaspoon baking powder, a pinch of salt, one teaspoon vanilla. Mix and beat well. Put one square unsweetened chocolate into a small dish that will fit the top of your tea kettle and cover. Do this first and it is well melted by the time the rest is ready. Add this to the other ingredients, stirring constantly as you pour in. Beat well. Bake in a moderate oven. Sour milk or buttermilk and soda can be used in this cake with equal success. Frost in white or chocolate frosting. It is nice served in squares with a walnut meat on each.

Mayonnaise Dressing—One-half cup vinegar, one tablespoon butter, two eggs well beaten, one teaspoon salt, one teaspoon mustard (dry or prepared, one teaspoon cornstarch, three tablespoons sugar. Beat all together, then cook until thick. When cool add one-half cup milk. This is fine on cabbage for cold stews, or for potato salad.

Hoover Johnny Cake—Soak two cups stale bread crumbs, one and one-half cups cornmeal, two cups hot milk. Add large tablespoon of lard, one tablespoon of sugar, pinch of salt, two well-beaten eggs, by teaspoons butter, and one cup water. Bake in greased pan in hot oven 20 minutes.

Gets Along Without Nest. The whippoorwill doesn't build a nest. It lays two large, round eggs in a slight depression in the ground—say in a cow's track in the pasture, or even upon the top of a dead and rotting log in the woods. If the eggs are discovered the bird will carry them away in its mouth and deposit them somewhere else, and it will do the same thing with its young.

INFLUENZA CURE.

A cure for Spanish influenza, even in its advanced stages was announced last night by Dr. Louis J. Tint, former Illinois bacteriologist and a member of the research department of the university of Chicago.

The cure, Dr. Tint declared, was observed and the patient administered to check diphtheria.

In an address last night before the Chicago Medical Society, at Lincoln Center, Chicago, the scientist asserted he had applied the antitoxin to seventy-five patients under his observation and that all either had been cured, or were now on the road to recovery. Some of them, he said, were near death at the time the injection was administered.

Blames Lack of Sugar. Dr. Tint ascribed the lack of sugar as one of the chief causes of the epidemic. Sugar, he said, was "fuel" for the body. Without it a great part of the most nutritious of foods were inadmissible to the human system, according to his statements.

Three Germs Found. Dr. Tint declared he had discovered three germs which formed the nucleus of the prevailing epidemic. He designated them as staphylococcus aureus, which forms carbuncles; streptococcus, super-inducing blood poisoning, and Vincent's bacillus, also known as cancrum moris, causing sores in the throat. The combination, he said was offset by the diphtheria anti-toxin.

THE FIXED ROSE

"Is the operation a success?" asked the great financier, eagerly.

"Most certainly and astoundingly," replied the doctor. "Everything is what I would call O. K. If you just keep the bandage on your eyes for a few days."

"But doctor, how am I going to get to my office? I simply have to be there tomorrow morning!" declared the great financier.

"Slide in your car—nothing easier," said the doctor.

"Oh, no, I wouldn't bother with the car for such a short distance. Besides, walking is good for me."

"Well, get a little boy to lead you there for the three or four days necessary to restore your sight."

The great financier was walking slowly along and was just turning a corner with a little colored boy leading him by the hand.

"Why, hello, Bicklesnitch! What's the trouble?" asked his old friend, Chauncey Wackton.

"Why, hello, Wackton. Oh, nothing, only my eyes were troubling me a little, that's all," answered the great financier.

"That's too bad, old chap. Can't I lend you some money until you are well again? I didn't like you were in such straitened circumstances. Bicklesnitch! It certainly does hurt me to see it!" and Wackton sniffed a tear or two away.

"What are you talking about, Wackton? I don't need any money. I've got barrels of it. Are you crazy?"

"You don't need money? Well, what the dickens has this black kid got his hat out for?"

"But the great financier didn't let him finish. 'Wackton! Tell me, is—are—does—has anybody put money in his pocket?'"

"You bet they have. I gave him a quarter for yuh, myself and—"

"Blanketty—blank—blank—blank," swore the great financier, and he kicked the boy clean over the fence into somebody's rainbarrel—still with his hat out.

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO DR. BRADY, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

THE WOODEN WOMAN

She enters the consulting room of a physician, though in doubt of the wisdom of her decision. She sits in the chair the doctor indicates, and then she goes into a deep silence.

"I don't like the voluble woman who talks so long the doctor can get no information at all."

She obstinately preserves her silence as long as the doctor will wait, in sheer desperation the doctor finally betrays himself into her hands. He grips his teeth, smiles encouragingly, and says: "What seems to be the trouble?"

Then the wooden woman answers the long silence and answers: "I'm sure I don't know."

Oh, there must be a hundred other callings than medicine, but never had a doctor who does not realize that the doctor who smiles and answers: "I'm sure I don't know."

"What you need is a good tonic," the wooden woman finishes.

There is extenuation enough. The doctor hastily writes the prescription and bows her out, and she hopes the doctor will do her so little good that she will never come back.

Think it over in advance. If you are going to see the doctor make a resolve to tell him the truth for the best of your ability. You have

AN EXPERIMENT IN CHARACTER READING.

How beautiful the line of his profile was, tragic in its beauty from some ancestor who mysteriously could not transmit all the emotions that must have at some time lived behind that beautiful exterior. Yet Albin had done nothing to his face since he had the modeling of it. He had shut his mouth to a line of repression and he had invited a glint of suspicion into his eyes.

I copied that out of one of Alice Brown's books because I loved it so. It puts into more vivid words than I ever could have found, feelings I have long had about the things we do to our faces.

ANAEMIA AND POOR BLOOD

How Mrs. Burnell's Daughter Recovered.

Dressville, N. H. "My daughter was anemic, had poor blood and suffered from indigestion and bilious attacks. As Vinol had built up my son some time ago, I gave it to my daughter—she soon improved in health, and it has built her up and restored her health." Mrs. S. Burnell.

The reason Vinol was so successful in Miss Burnell's case is because it contains beef and cod liver peptones, iron and manganese peptones and glycerophosphates, the very elements needed to build up a weakened, run-down system, make rich red blood and create strength.

Hatless, with sleeves rolled up to her elbows, she knelt before the fire, engaged in a quiet but determined struggle with a rusty and refractory kettle. Presently she got up from her knees.

"In two minutes you will have your tea," she announced in the ruthless tones of a professional nurse. "How is your head now?"

"Better—" For the first time she turned and looked him full in the face, and he broke off blankly. Either she was young, or she had conserved in those two clear, steady eyes all that is youthful and all that is splendid in youth. She was smiling, and inexpressible.

"Yes; it was good of you to come. I know I hadn't the right to ask. I behaved vilely last night."

She looked up into his face with an innocent wonder.

"Did you? I didn't see it. I only thought that you were just as I had always believed you to be—generous and chivalrous and loyal."

He still held her hand, and with a grave courtesy he led her to the great armchair by the fire. She sat there, her head bent like a frail flower, and he turned away from her for a moment, his face colorless.

"I want to tell you that I know," he went on quietly. "I thought it would save you trouble if I told you. One has a fine instinct in these things, and last night I felt suddenly that I had gone out of your life. It hurt me unbearably for a time."

"I am to marry Captain Arnaud," she said, with a note of defiance in her low voice.

"That can make no difference. I take you with me always. You understand?"

"Yes," she said.

"Then good-by."

She must have felt that he was bringing up his last reserve of self-control, yet she rose impulsively with outstretched hands.

"Good-by, Richard. Forgive me—and God bless you."

He turned abruptly and left her without answer.

Outside a gray twilight already shrouded the pompous London square. Above the immediate silence there sounded the note of a bugle, and after that the long-drawn-out wail of the bagpipers. Some regiment of the march forward. Richard Farquhar lifted his head and listened. It came down to him through the ages, the call of fighters to the fighting man, the command of duty. That much was left. Richard Farquhar turned and went home.

As he entered and saw Robert Sower standing by the fireside, his gloved hands behind his back, his whole attitude expressive of a cool self-certainty, his very pulses seemed to stop and then break into a hammering gallop of triumph. He closed the door sharply, and Sower turned.

"Well?" Farquhar said quietly.

"I have come for your apology."

"Then you have come on a fruitless errand."

A tremor seemed to pass over Sower's body. The brown, slightly protruding eyes flickered. Suddenly and terribly his self-restraint broke down.

"I am the Jew, am I not—the son of a Jew?—Very well—I now I shall act like one!"

He began to pace the room with short, feverish steps. "I am going to tell you something no one has ever heard before. Only three people know it, and they have held their tongues—your mother and Major Mowbray. No—don't interrupt. You can't silence me with those damned eyes of yours. You've got to listen. You don't remember your father, do you? He was in India when you were a child, and your mother does not speak very often of him. You see how well I know things. But you are very proud of him—and rightly. He was a brilliant soldier and something of an inventor. He invented a gun that, though it would be twenty years old now, would still rank head and shoulders above anything we have. It was unfortunate that he spent more than he had and gambled with what he did not possess. The British government was, as usual, dilatory and parsimonious. Colonel Farquhar offered his invention to a foreign power. My father knew everything. I was a young subaltern at the time. My father felt it his duty to inform the authorities. Previous to this he and Colonel Farquhar had been intimate. As a last act of friendship he warned your father of his purpose. Your father murdered him."

"My father lived a few hours," Sower went on deliberately. "He was a Jew, but he was a great man. He held your father in his power. He could have had his pound of flesh. He had mercy. He let your father go on three conditions. The first condition was that he withdraw his offer to the foreign power, the second that he resigned his commission, the third that he left the country. These things he did."

"My father died in Africa," Farquhar said.

"So I have been told."

There was a long silence. Sower studied the younger man out of the corner of his eyes. There was something he did not fully understand—a phase of humanity that did not fit in with his carefully drawn up catalogue. This red-hot temperament grown suddenly cold frightened him. It was like handling an unknown explosive.

"Your father signed a confession in front of witnesses. You will understand that in view of the circumstances it was felt necessary to have some hold over him. Here is the paper."

Farquhar accepted the neatly folded document and took it nearer to the light. He read it carefully, without any trace of emotion.

"I understand," he held the paper thoughtfully, as though weighing it. "Of course it is obvious that this is of great value to me. How much do you want?"

"I am in no need of money. It is your career or mine," he said. "You must resign. Half an hour since I would have been satisfied with an apology."

Farquhar nodded.

"I give you my word of honor that I shall send in my papers tonight in return for this letter."

"I accept your word. The letter is in your hands."

Farquhar started slightly and then smiled.

"Ah, I might have burned it. You are a man of remarkable discernment. Well, our bargain is closed. I dare say I have to thank you for your long silence in this matter. But virtue is its own reward. Good night."

Sower took up his hat from the table. He frowned at his own hand, which shook.

"You are confoundedly cool about it all," he said. "One would think you didn't care."

The door closed. Farquhar went back to his writing table. He did not tear up the yellow, faded letter, but propped it against a bronze candlestick and sat there staring at it with blank eyes. Then he began to write. He wrote four letters. One was to the war office. When he had finished he opened a drawer and took out an army revolver, which he examined and then loaded carefully. He switched off the electric lamp. He went over to the hearth and stamped his father's confession into the embers. The polished metal winked like an evil silver eye in the reflected firelight.

"Mr. Farquhar—are you there?" His hand still lifted, frozen by surprise into immobility, he saw in the glass opposite him that the door had opened. Against the dimly lighted passage outside he recognized the neat silhouette of a woman's figure. The first instant the room was flooded with light.

"Oh, I beg your pardon. It was so quiet and dark I did not know you were in. I came for my eau-de-Cologne."

She stopped. He had turned instantly, but not in time. Her eyes rested on his hand. "Oh!" she said under her breath. She closed the door and came quietly across the room till she stood opposite him. "What were you going to do, Mr. Farquhar?"

He threw back his head. He was still very young, and in a minute more he had counted on facing the mysteries of life and death. His face was ghastly in its rigid resolve and dread.

"I don't think it's much good lying about it, Miss Smith," he said, with a short laugh.

"No," she nodded. "You were going to kill yourself. I have seen that before. My father blew out his brains. It was an act of sudden madness. Money drove him mad. Is it money with you?"

"No. I have lost everything."

"There is always the light ahead."

"I don't understand."

She turned to him with an expression that was new to him. The small, thin face seemed illuminated with an inward fire.

"There is a light somewhere," she said, and her voice rang with stern enthusiasm. "It must exist—and if it does not exist we must light it ourselves, with our own hands, with our own ideals. We must have it or believe in it."

ABE MARTIN

There's very few things as non-essential as a Socialist just at this time. If a fellow could just have dyspepsia, that's all right, but he might as well have it out of his system, said Abe, as he paid $1.25 for a watermelon.

Dinner Stories

A young woman was telling of the time when she toured through Italy with her father, stating they liked all the Italian cities, but most of all they loved Venice.

"Ah, Venice, to be sure," said the friend. "I can readily understand that your father would like Venice, with the gondolas and St. Mark's and Michael Angelo."

"Oh, no," the young woman interrupted. "It wasn't that. He liked it because he could sit in the hotel and fish from the window."

"Good morning, children," said the arithmetic teacher. "How many of you have prepared an original problem in multiplication, as I requested?" Only one hand went up. "Well, William, you may give your problem and the rest of the class may solve it."

"If my baby sister is a year old now and weighs 20 pounds, and keeps on gaining two ounces a day until she is 16 years old, and if the price of living doubles again in the next ten years, how much will my sister's graduation outfit cost? Mother says she would like to know."

At Princeton they tell of a freshman who, as he blithely went his way whistling on the streets one day, was accosted by a classmate. "Whither away?"

"I'm going to Dr. Smith's to be examined for appendicitis," said the other.

"Great Caesar!" exclaimed the classmate. "You don't seem to be very much worried about it."

"Oh, no," said the freshman, "there won't be anything doing. I've never been able to pass an examination the first time in all my fair young life."

Who Is On the Lord's Side?

By REV. J. H. RALSTON, D. D.
Secretary of Correspondence Department,
Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT:—Where is on Jehovah's side let him come unto me.—R. V.

It is related that at a certain point in Lincoln's presidential experience, when the affairs of the Union were in a precarious condition, a friend remarked to him that it was a good thing to have the Lord on our side. Mr. Lincoln very seriously replied that he was more concerned about whether he was on the Lord's side. There are indications that the German Kaiser is more concerned on having the Lord on his side than about being on the Lord's side.

The natural tendency of man is to seek his own or the things of humanity, rather than the things of the Lord, and man is simply asking what some particular course will bring to him, or what it will bring to his time. The chief end of man in these days is not to glorify God. In this, grievous wrong is done. When a course of action before one, the chief question should not be, "How will it affect me?" nor, "How will it affect my neighbor?" but "How will it affect God?"

The great need of the day is a new sense of God—God at the beginning, God in the middle, God at the ending. The right thing for man is to go where God is, and to go where he is, if man would do that many of his great theological questions would be settled. God manifests himself through his Word, and if men would go to the Word of God with these questions they would soon be substantially correct on all of them.

The text suggests the question: "Who is on the Lord's side?" or rather, "What man or woman has a right to say that he is on the Lord's side?" In the particular case before us, the people had made a golden calf and were worshiping it. To do that was to break the two commandments of the Decalogue, and it became open idolatry. It is inevitable that a man who will worship something, or some one else, nor can a man be on the Lord's side if he does those things that the Lord hates.

If a man would know his duty to the Lord he should seek to know what the Lord thinks of certain things, and then again he must take the Lord's judgment through his Word, for he cannot know what the Lord thinks unless he knows his Word. As to particular actions, a man may be left to his own judgment, but as to the great principles that lie at the root of things, the Lord makes clear declaration in his Word. Does the Lord love a liar, brutality, deception? The remnant of God's image in man says at once, "No!" Does the Lord favor truth, liberty, kindness? That same remnant of God's image says, "Yes! Yes!" And consequently, the duty is clear, and he should stand for these things. We might sum up everything by saying, "Ye cannot serve God and mammon."

The scene connected with our text was probably this: There was a golden calf and people were dancing about it. Moses stood aloof and made the cry, "Whoso is on the Lord's side, let him come to me." According to the constitution and nature of man we make appeal to him as to his conscience, to his sense of duty or privilege, and he must make choice.

What is it to be on the Lord's side? It is a natural inheritance from our sinning first parents that we will either be indifferent to God's commands or we will positively refuse to obey them. Fundamentally, the issue is the same. In the case before us, the worshiper of the golden calf either continued his dancing and worship, or just endeavored to be neutral. A man must "come across"; he must take a positive stand. The position of a neutral is the position of the enemy of God. There are no neutrals in our country now as to Germany. Politically we were neutral until the president said that a state of war existed, but now the neutral is a pro-German. We must be out and out for the United States of America. A man's religious obligations could be illustrated by taking the two sides of an imaginary line, and to an imaginary line there can be only two sides. It is one thing or it is the other. We must be positively, clearly, professionally on God's side, or we are against him. In the day in which we are living the ideals and motives are to be more sharply defined than in former days.

An eloquent man said very recently that heretofore men were living to make money, and now they are dying to preserve righteousness. Precisely so of a man's actions; if their character is to be determined by whether they are right in the sight of God rather than whether they have been popular or socially beneficial, man will arrive at the realization of the purpose of God and at the realization of his own greatest happiness.

Golden Text: I will give him unto Jehovah for all the days of his life. 1 Samuel I 11.

ABRAHAM GIVING ISAAC TO GOD
Human sacrifice prevailed in the country of which Abraham had settled. The custom was based upon the idea that the best and most treasured thing one possessed should be offered to the gods; and further as children were innocent they were the kind of a victim most likely to appease an angry god. So the Phoenicians tossed their children into the red sea as a sacrifice to their gods, and thought by that atrocious deed, they appeased the deity. That was a dim and crude age in which Abraham lived and a cruel race surrounded him. He must have thought of as enjoying the facilities or attaining the wisdom or experience of the Twentieth century. He was sincere searcher for truth, but far from infallible in either its discernment or application. Then too, the power or example is great and subtle. It is possible that witnessing the devotion of children to Moloch by their parents he became possessed with the idea that God called him to devote Isaac on the altar. The second law we receive the mental picture of the patriarch's imagination as if it were the voice of God, the third relates the beginning of its realization. It is a most interesting picture of the Gethsemane between. The preparation was made expeditiously, but with such care that nothing was forgotten. The journey consumed three days. So Isaac went up the mountain, and the wood which was to consume him, Keener than the knife which Abraham held was the innocent query how could he be so wicked as to sacrifice his only son? "Where is the lamb?" May not the father's answer be tinged with the hope of a substitute when he replied, "God will provide." The delusion to run almost to its tragic end in order that by his sudden intervention he might show Abraham that was not what he wanted at all. All human sacrifice, not the son of promise that was stricken dead that morning on the lonely mountain. In an object lesson, a picture incident, the king of the East, Isaac, once for all, that the taking of human life was not placar and was revolting, instead of pleasing to God. Thus as ever a wise and merciful, good Providence brought good out of evil, honey out of the eater. Scripture does not afford a more instructive example and illustration of the difference between right and wrong. The "letter" in this instance would have made Abraham a murderer of his own under circumstances superlatively atrocious and heinous. It would have destroyed the heart of promise, disarranged the divine plan, fastened human sacrifice as a custom permanently upon the Hebrew race. The "spirit" in this instance was a willingness on the part of Abraham to devote the living son wholly to the plan at the expense of his own life. "I'm making him 'living' not 'dead' sacrifice wholly and acceptable to God believing this to be only a reasonable service in view of the munificence of Providence. God has been further, that through the son thus devoted, God would according to promise give him a posterity numerous as stars and sands."

THE TEACHER'S LANTERN
Classic literature gives several tragic incidents like that of Abraham's sacrifice of Isaac. The best known is that of Iphigenia. Agamemnon having offended the goddess Artemis, she in revenge prevented the sailing of the Greek fleet to Troy and could only be appeased by the sacrifice of his daughter. Agamemnon's wife and Euripides make Iphigenia the heroine of their tragedies as do other poets whose verses are now lost. She is the theme of many beautiful paintings in some of which Agamemnon is hiding his face from the sacrifice. Tennyson puts a similar theme in verse for the land of Odin, where the king is required to sacrifice his dearest, his wife or only son to propitiate the angry Thor in the interest of the people. The son is already bound to the altar when his mother shrieking, "I am his dearest!" rushes upon the knife. One motive of Abraham in this sacrifice may have been the fact that he alone was lacking in devotion to Jehovah if he did not make as great a sacrifice as they did or that they might infer from his great wealth that he was not sincere in his service of Jehovah. Paternal instincts and affections, family ambitions, fondest hopes, all were centered and concentrated in Isaac. He gave him up to God his dearest, interested loyalty would have completed demonstration. It would also be superlative evidence of faith, for Isaac was the sole inheritor of the promise through which the world was to be blessed. Abraham would thus show that he believed God would be able to fulfill his word by some other means. Abraham gave evidence that he had already advanced to faith in immortality and the resurrection. The writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews says "From whence (the dead) (Abraham) received him (Isaac) in a figure (of the resurrection)." High Bridge, Kentucky was tested when complete suits of armor, armor bodies of the victims of the Civil War, drawn by five locomotives formed the train. First they crossed the bridge at full head of steam; then they backed slowly. Next they dashed forward, suddenly reversing the engines and clapping on the brakes so as to throw the whole ponderous weight of the train upon the bridge. Every atom felt the strain, but the bridge stood the fearful test and thousands of interested spectators broke-out in applause. Hundreds of thousands of travelers have since crossed that fearful gulf with perfect equanimity, because the bridge was once so thoroughly tested and endured the ordeal. The true and false must somehow be distinguished. He must needs be shown how all could be given up to God as a living sacrifice, not one of death, but the best way of giving life to God was to live it, not to end it. Jehovah's will: "Jehovah will see or provide." A significant name in Scripture this seen happiest. Tradition says that the outcropping rock under the Mosque of Omar is the identical spot. When the story of the present war comes to be written it will be discovered to be superlatively rich in instances of intelligent courageous, devoted sacrifice, unsurpassed in the history of the world. Real sacrifice to God is not the destruction of something of great value and high price, but it is the using of it, whatever it is, in the manner that will gratify God, having his glory and the welfare of others in view. Any one who has seen the incrustated bodies of the victims of Vesuvius in the Museum at Pompeii will not think it impossible that Lot's wife should have been stifled by the sulphurous fumes and riveted to the spot where her feet and treasure evidently were and gradually became incrustated and finally entirely encased in the salt.

WHAT IS CHRISTIAN CITIZENSHIP
The very fact that the word which designates a town-dweller has passed to all members of the nation whether urban or rural, so that we call them all citizens, is incidental evidence of the large figure which the city plays in the nation's conduct. It is believed that the next census will show fifty per centum of the whole population living in cities. Under our suffrage law goes the city, we go to the country to get our cities right. It is our patriotic duty as well as our religious obligation. Again, America has passed to the fore among nations through the fortunes of war. To make this a good country is to make all the world better.

Brodhead News

Brodhead, Oct. 13.—The report which gained circulation here on Wednesday to the effect that Dr. N. M. Sum of Janesville, formerly of this city was very low with the influenza, was dispelled when a letter report came that he was at his home on a furlough and was feeling fine. Mrs. Albert Ruehlow and children departed Thursday for their home at Beach, North Dakota, after spending some time here with relatives and friends. George Richardson was sufficiently recovered Thursday to be able to go

Would Welcome Age.
Glady had red hair and the school children liked to tease her about it. The teacher, finding her almost in tears, tried to comfort her. But Glady pouted and said: "I'll be glad when I get to be an old lady." Her teacher, puzzled, asked why she was in a hurry to grow old. "Then my old red hair will just have to turn gray," was the startling answer.

Frank was the youngest of a family consisting of three boys, and was immensely excited over the arrival of a baby sister. He ran over to a neighbor's home to tell her the glad news and said: "Say, what do you think? We've got a new baby at our house, and it's a lady!"

WHEN TURKEY IS CARVED ONLY A FEW BONES WILL REMAIN; ARMENIA, MESOPOTAMIA, SYRIA, HEJAZ, ARABIA TO BE CUT AWAY

Present Sultan of Turkey and map of his dominions; General Liman von Sanders (arrow), in command of German-Turk forces, and members of his staff.

The great Turkish empire is about to be broken up. At the peace table it is likely that the Turks will be permitted to retain only the province of Anatolia. They will be deprived of their holdings in Europe; of the province of El Hejaz, which has already set up a separate government; of Syria, which desires a French protectorate; of Armenia, which asks for independence, and of Mesopotamia, which will probably be taken over by the British.

Make Report. Milwaukee. The farm division of the government employment bureau Fourth and Cedar streets, reports its chief task now is to fill all calls received from the dairy farmers of southern Wisconsin.

Reliable men applying for farm work are daily becoming more scarce. Although there are as many applicants as during the early summer the men apparently are not satisfied with the positions offered by the bureau.

Earlier in the season the farm division dispatched about seventy-five men weekly to farms throughout the state. The seven day report of the week ending Oct. 12 points out that only ten men were placed on farms by the local branch. The report of the previous week shows that nineteen men were placed.

The wages now offered average $45 monthly for single men, and $60 for married men whose wives will aid in the work. Boys are no longer called for except in rare instances.

Clean Your Combs. Instead of washing combs, clean them by brushing and pulling a piece of cotton through the teeth, always changing it as it gets soiled, then rub with a clean cloth.

Millions of American troops abroad and more arriving on every transport. That's America's answer to the peace feelers put out by the Kaiser's pawns. Officials have announced that by next July America will have 4,800,000 men in the field to drive the Huns off the globe if necessary.

Edgerton News

Edgerton, Oct. 18.—H. S. Pomeroy passed away at his farm home yesterday from pneumonia, which developed after an attack of influenza. Mr. Pomeroy was one of the pioneer tobacco raisers of this section and was one of the promoters of the Farmers' Equity society in Edgerton and associated with the local Farmers' Warehouse company, being president of that organization since it was organized. Mr. Pomeroy always had the interests of the farmer at heart and had been a persistent worker in his interest. Mr. Pomeroy was born in Centerville, Ohio, Sept. 13, 1842, and came to Wisconsin early in life. He was past 76 years of age at the time of his death. He was in the city Saturday. He is survived by his wife, two daughters, Mrs. Herman Maas and Mrs. Charles Maas; two sons, Fayette and Elmer, and two brothers, W. H. Pomeroy and J. T. Pomeroy, all of whom reside in this vicinity. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

The remains of Elmer T. Johnson, who died from influenza, arrived in the city last evening from Port Dodge, Ia. Elmer T. Johnson enlisted in Edgerton in the motor truck corps and was assigned to the motor school at Fort Dodge for training. A brother, Robert C. Johnson, lives on Albion Prairie, and his mother, Mrs. Minn. Funeral services were conducted today and the remains were interred in Jensen cemetery.

The following letter from Willard Schmidt, written from France, will be of interest to Edgerton readers, as he mentions that he has seen a number of Edgerton boys, and reports them all well.

"Sept. 16, 1918.—My Dearest Parents: I think it is about time I was writing you. I have not had very much time, for we moved again and are now in a rest area, but don't know how long we will be here. I am feeling fine and all the fellows I have seen are fine."

"Henry Johnson, Edgar Greenwood, Harold Dave, John Flagg and Harold Bliven are all around here and are in the best of health. Harold Dave said that it was sure hell up there where he was, and to see the boys shot up. Lt. Pelton is in command of the company. I saw Harvey Davis yesterday and he was feeling fine. The cigarettes and gum did taste good, and that is a good way to send them, and I guess there will be a good many fat letters coming from the boys as they are having their folks send them."

"We are stationed in a town about the size of Monroe, and it is sure a well place. They have very good stores about the only ones that look like American ones. Lots of pretty girls with all the latest fashions. We are about 45 miles north of the place we were stationed at when we first came. Had a real shower and bath yesterday, the first one in quite a while, and I washed all the clothes off and now with clean clothes on, I feel fine.

I suppose you have read of the good news and of the big drive our American army is doing not far from here. They sure are putting lots of Huns under the sod. We will be in the push again soon.

"Am sending the Stars and Stripes. My best love to all.

Your loving son,

Willard.

WINNING THE D. S. O. BY ETHELRED ELKINS

considerable speculation, Bellingham seized the opportunity presented by his arrival off the capital of Osolumpe of consulting with his royal acquaintance on the matter.

"I lib for expedition palaver," he began, as he sat down in the Madeira chair which was kept for his especial benefit.

"No sabbey?" said Lokomoko.

"I lib for bush-fight palaver," the visitor went on, and proceeded to detail the plans which had already formulated themselves in his active brain.

"Whisky palaver no can lib, bush-fight palaver no can lib," he announced at last.

Bellingham whistled, and John Hardening, the Alligator's head-kroonman, appeared with a case of whisky. The king's eyes glistened, for his friend's offerings had previously been limited to single bottles.

"O Bellingham," he murmured fervently, "me dash you one plenty fine bush-fight."

Up Bumpopo river was a fact, called Nunki, between the owner of which and Lokomoko no love was lost because they did not contribute toward his revenue. The preliminaries were quickly arranged, the captain of the Alligator returned to his ship and issued certain orders. At daylight next morning the gunboat hove up her anchor.

All day long the tiny man-of-war pluggled against the oily, evil-smelling current; all day long her captain coaxed her from the sweltering bridge above the little deckhouse on the poop. It was nearly sunset when the lazy crocodiles were frightened out of their wits by the splash of the Alligator's anchor and the rattle of her chain as she brought to anchor.

Nunki really stood outside the boundaries of Osolumpe; in fact, it was on German territory, and not within the sphere of British influence at all. But to oblige his friend Bellingham, Lokomoko had temporarily altered his frontiers.

The traders did not extend a very hearty welcome to their visitor when he landed, but this Bellingham ignored.

"Bullo!" he cried, as he glanced round. "This does not look as if you were besieged by the Ju Ju men."

"What the deuce are you talking about, and what the deuce are you doing here, anyway?" growled Milligan surlily.

"I have come to give you the protection of the British flag, and by the holy poker you are going to have it."

Bellingham replied gaily. He had already sized up the men with whom he had to deal, and quickly recognized that, for reasons of their own, they preferred his room to his company.

"We have got no use for your blankety protection up here," broke in Fraser. "Come, have a cocktail, and then paddle your old bugtrap down river again."

"You have not been attached, then?" queried Bellingham, after a pause which was occupied by the concocting and swallowing of the potent mixture known as "cocktail."

"Attacked? Who on earth would attack us?" gasped Fraser, in genuine astonishment.

"White man plenty fine chop! Sabbey!" said Bellingham, accompanying the remark with cannibal operations in pantomime.

"Rot!" snapped Milligan. "Well, if you have not been, you are going to be," insisted the visitor, adding significantly, "And I am going to see it through."

"It is not any business of yours, any way," said Milligan, roughly.

"Pardon me, but it is very much my business," laughed our hero.

"I should advise you to keep off the grass, my boy. This is German territory," continued the other.

"Don't you make any error!" responded Bellingham, as he turned away towards his boat.

Nothing happened during the night, but the silence of dawn was broken by the rattle of desultory firing in the bush at the back of Nunki. This, however, did not seem to surprise the captain of the Alligator. He was fully dressed and had been walking the poop for some time previously.

Funnily enough, the bugler was asleep in the gunboat. Two minutes after the first shot was heard the bugler sounded off "General quarters," and within 10 minutes the three four-inch guns of the gunboat's broadside were blazing away into the brush.

The engagement did not last long, but quite long enough to bring Messrs Milligan and Fraser scurrying off in a dugout, clothed only in pyjamas and funk.

"By gum, you were right, after all, captain!" murmured Milligan awkwardly. "Apologise for last night! Thought you were pulling our legs."

"All right," answered Bellingham, with a cheery nod. "I am jussy just at present. Go down to my cabin and order what you like. You'll find my steward somewhere."

After half an hour's bombardment the captain of the Alligator ordered the "cease fire." Instead of the shrieking of shell, the shrieking of human being rent the air.

This was something quite outside Bellingham's calculations. His plans had been laid with the greatest care; he had taken every precaution to avoid accidents. An acute observer would have noticed that, although the rifle shots came from the left of the factory, all the Alligator's shells fell well to the right.

Bellingham, never at a loss, immediately ordered the bugler to sound the "Landing Party" call. In a few minutes the boats were lowered, the men tumbled in, and the little army went ashore. Advancing in skirmish order, Bellingham found little difficulty in locating his objective, for the air was still alive with the cries of suffering humanity.

Forcing their way through a couple of hundred yards of brush, the army came to a clearing where on was erected a circular stockade. "Slab-trader, by Jove!" muttered Bellingham under his breath; "no wonder the blackguards were so anxious to get rid of me!"

The guards, deeming discretion the better part of valor, had vanished. The sailors rushed forward, and the gates of the stockade were thrown open.

Then Bellingham returned to his ship very well satisfied with the morning's work, for he knew that he held Messrs Milligan and Fraser in the hollow of his hand.

"Well, my friends, what do you think of matters now?" he exclaimed as he entered his cabin.

Fortified by his whisky, the two worthies had recovered some of their equanimity.

"I suppose it is all over?" queried Milligan.

"The first act, yes!" answered Bellingham enigmatically.

Fraser flattered himself that he grasped the naval officer's meaning.

"We will dash you something handsome for this," he murmured.

"You can bet your bottom dollar that you will do what I want," remarked Bellingham. "Now, away ashore with you and make yourselves into decent white men—if you can. I will have a yarn with you when I have written my dispatch."

Then he bundled them out of his cabin and into the boat which was waiting at the gangway.

By the way, he added as an afterthought, "I am afraid your cattle have stampeded!"

Jack Bellingham bathed and breakfasted leisurely and then sat down to compose his dispatch. No doubt this document still reposes among the archives of the foreign office and the admiralty, but it has never been decorated by the public eye. Of course it was fiction, but at the same time it was fiction which had a solid foundation of fact. When finished the manuscript was a piece of article literature which would have gladdened the heart of any magazine editor.

As Bellingham laid down his pen, the signal man entered and reported a war canoe coming up the river. Gathering up his manuscript, the captain went on deck, sent for the writer and ordered him to copy the dispatch in duplicate as quickly as possible.

When the war canoe shot up alongside Bellingham saw that it contained no less a personage than the prime minister of Osolumpe.

"Bellingham, O Bellingham, plenty big ship lib for Bumpopo!" gasped the portly old gentleman, nearly sprawling on deck in his hurry to communicate the intelligence.

"Flagship?" queried Bellingham anxiously.

"No sabbey?" murmured the other.

"Plenty big ship lib for admiral palaver?"

"Yes, admiral lib for Bumpopo."

"Here's a go!" commented Bellingham, his brow puckering in thought.

In his heart he blessed Lokomoko for his thoughtfulness in sending the news.

"O Bellingham, I lib for whisky palaver!" suddenly announced the prime minister.

As usual, Bellingham did not need to think twice as to his course of action. "You dash me one runner, me dash you plenty whisky," he said.

In a moment the exchange was effected and the prime minister went on his way down river, hugging a case of whisky.

The arrival of the flagship at Bumpopo was unexpected, and, to say the least of it, inconvenient. If Bellingham could not explain his actions to the satisfaction of the admiral, he would, without doubt, be court-martialed, for he knew that he was unpopular in the flagship, and he was also perfectly aware of the position he occupied in the esteem of the lords commissioners of the admiralty. Consequently he determined to take no risks.

One copy of his dispatch was sealed up, addressed to the foreign office, and sent off by the runner to the nearest port up the coast at which the homeward bound mail boat called. He then sent a polite note ashore, asking Messrs Milligan and Fraser to lunch, and ordered the engineer to raise steam for full speed as soon as possible. Finally, he repaired to the wardrobe and read his literary effort over to his officers, in order that its most salient points might be impressed upon their memories.

In due time the two traders came off in the whaler. They completely failed to notice that she was immediately hoisted to her wits, because Bellingham hustled them into his cabin. Having assiduously plied them with gin-and-bitters, they sat down to lunch.

"Look here, you fellows," began the Alligator's captain, as, acting the genial host, he ordered his steward to fill up their glasses with champagne, "I want you to do something for me."

"We've promised to dash you something," murmured Fraser.

Bellingham spoke with unnecessary loudness, and began to make a most unpleasant noise with the cutlery, consequently his guests did not hear the captain working.

"I don't want you to dash me anything," he said. "I only want you to back me up over this little show. I hope to get my promotion out of it."

Bellingham proceeded to explain at some length, while his steward filled their glasses. The precious pair were nothing loth to make the most of their host's hospitality. By the time they had each swallowed a couple of glasses of port and two or three liqueurs, both of them felt at peace with the world in general, and with Jack Bellingham in particular.

"I say, Cap'n," exclaimed Fraser suddenly, "what is that funny churning noise under the floor?"

Milligan sprang up with an oath and went to one of the scuttles, closely followed by his partner. What they saw did not please them, for it was the banks of the river flying past as the Alligator sped full steam down river, with the current helping her along, and their factory at Nunki disappearing round the bend.

Both traders swung round. They were about to spring, but thought better of it, for Bellingham was standing up with a revolver in each hand.

"Kidnapped, by gum!" cried Fraser. "You'll pay for this!" snarled Milligan.

"Now, my friends, sit down and calm yourselves," said Bellingham coolly. "You have got to come with me to Bumpopo, so you will make the best of the situation, if you're not fools!"

The traders looked at one another. Milligan shrugged his shoulders.

"But why the deuce do you want to take us to Bumpopo?" queried Fraser.

"Well, you see, the flagship is there with my commander-in-chief," Bellingham responded. "You have got to play the part of distressed British subjects whom the opportune arrival of H. M. S. Alligator and Lieut. Commander John Bellingham, R. N., rescued from the cooking pots of blood-thirsty cannibals. Sabbey?"

"But we do not pose as British subjects," broke in Milligan, with a laugh. "Nunki is on German territory, me lad!"

"Don't you make any error!" ejaculated Bellingham. "From what you have seen of me, do you think that I am an absolute idiot?"

"Look here, captain, suppose we refuse to act the part of distressed British subjects? Suppose we refuse to haul you as our savior? What then?"

Bellingham looked at him, and there was a sardonic pity in his glance.

"Mr. Fraser," he said, "while you were on board this morning, drowning your funk in my whisky, I went ashore and made an interesting discovery in a certain clearing behind your factory."

"The deuce you did!" muttered Fraser, glancing at his partner.

"Sabbey!" Bellingham snapped.

Plainly they did sabbey.

"So you see," he went on, "it is either distressed British subjects or slave-traders. Personally, I don't care which role you choose. I shall get my promotion out of it either way."

The traders did not speak, but Bellingham knew that he would have no more trouble with them.

"Now that is settled, I hope you will make yourselves at home," he said genially. "There is the whisky, cigars and cigarettes in the box. You want anything, ring for my steward."

The "last post" was just sounding on the flagship as the Alligator bumped across Bumpopo bar. Long before she came to an anchor the big ship signalled querulously, "Captain repair on board." As soon as the cable was secured the captain did repair on board, highly elated.

It was 10 o'clock before he returned, to find his officers and his guests assembled in the gangway, anxiously awaiting his news. Bellingham said nothing, but went straight into the wardroom and ordered a bottle of champagne.

"It's all right, then, sir?" ventured the first lieutenant.

"You go over and ask the C-in-C," replied Bellingham, with a wink. "Baldee is riled enough to hit anything that comes within striking distance."

"Did he read the dispatch, sir?" asked his subordinate.

"He did," answered Bellingham; "and then tore it up and flung it on the deck. He swore he would relieve me on the spot! He swore he would put me under arrest! He swore he would court-martial me! I don't know what he did not swear!"

"Then I ventured to interpose a hope that he would recommend me for promotion. That finished him! He would have chased me out of his cabin if I had not mentioned the fact that, being unaware of his presence at Bumpopo, I had sent a duplicate dispatch to the foreign office."

"He cooled down a bit then, but even that did not make him civil. However, he is scared of the people at home, so my promotion is as good as an accomplished fact."

"Here's luck, sir!" cried his officers in unison.

"And I should not be a bit surprised if I got the D. S. O. for I laid it on pretty thick," he added, and then turned to his guests.

"I am sorry, gentlemen, I nearly forgot all about you. The admiral says he does not want to see any more of adjective me or my adjective distressed British subjects. We will give you a shake-down for the night, and I will send you home in our steam cutter tomorrow morning."

Thus closed the incident of the Nunki expedition. No international complications followed. Bellingham actually was promoted and awarded the D. S. O. His ship's company received the West African medal with one bar bearing the legend, "Nunki."

FRANCE PUTS G. O. P. ON PAR WITH PERSHING

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18.—The opinion the allies entertain of the Republican leaders in Congress who have been standing by the way and have been doing nothing against the "distressing" for peace with the Teutonic powers, is best evidenced by a cable from Paris, Oct. 9, 1918, which appeared in the New York Times (Democratic). The cable was as follows: "Paris, Oct. 9.—While Paris waited for President Wilson's reply to Germany, the French press continued to print long accounts of anti-armistice speeches in the United States Senate and a full symposium of American newspaper opinions, which, as it appears here, was unnecessary against an interruption in the fighting. In fact, the reports of the debates in the American Senate share first place with the news of the great military victories on the west front. Senators McPherson, Nelson and Lodge are as highly thought of in France today as are the American generals."

At the Democratic National Committee is sending out literature charging that the success of such men at the polls in November would bring dismay to our allies and bring "joy to the Kaiser and his cohorts."

London and Italian papers agree with Republican leaders in Congress that there must be no thought of peace with Germany, much less talk of it, on any other terms than those of unconditional surrender of her military resources and reparation and indemnity for her crimes.

American soldiers in France send home the message not to "dicker" with Germany but to permit them— with deadly bought victory, almost at their knees—under Pershing to dictate peace terms to the Kaiser. This is exactly the sentiment expressed by Senator Lodge, Republican leader in the senate, who says: "The burden of bringing about a conclusive peace rests not with the diplomats but where it belongs—on the shoulders of General Pershing."

That March 11, 1918, that day when commander of the united allies, Marshal Foch,

From every city and town and countryside neighborhood letters and telegrams are pouring in on congressmen, insisting that no negotiation be opened with Germany until she has unconditionally surrendered—the policy to which the Republican party is committed.

"The war must not only be won, but it must stay won." An inconclusive peace will mean that our blood and treasure have been poured out in vain," exclaims former President Taft.

When the Republican leaders in Congress and the Republican party are of one accord with the peoples of our Allies, of one opinion with "our boys over there" regarding the disaster of robbing our armies of their dearly bought right to name the day of peace in order to safeguard their sacrifices, and are representing the sentiment of the red-blooded American people who are against talking away the fruits of victory gained by American blood and treasure, for the Democratic National Committee to charge that a Republican victory at the polls next month would please the Kaiser, destroy our allies, and betray America is to make a charge whose absurdity is equaled only for its mendacity.

There is growing resentment among all classes of Americans over the Democratic National Committee's attempting to make it appear to our Allies and our enemies that a great political party of America which only peace over half the population of the northern states is so loyal that it cannot be entrusted with the government.

They regard this charge which is without the least foundation in fact, as being a libel upon the loyalty and unity of the American people in this great war, libel uttered by a political organization for the purpose of winning an election.

The terrible struggle in the work war has thus far made the work of peace impossible. The heavy sacrifices of the war should assure us an honorable peace on the threshold of which with the help of God, we are today."

"We must therefore undertake without delay the reorganization of our court in a natural and therefore solid basis."

"I am decided to accomplish this work with the free collaboration of my people in the spirit and principles which are allied monarchs have adopted in their effort of peace."

When Water Falls.
Water will not always put out a fire. This applies particularly to a fire where grease is present in quantities. A technical paper cites an instance where a fire in the oil box of an engine was spread over a large radius when water was thrown upon it. The water scattered the grease in all directions, and some of it was caught up by a flywheel, spreading the burning grease over the building. In a few minutes the whole plant was burning.

Apt Childish Comparison.
Our century bird had begun to molt. My small sister saw the feathers falling around and lying on the floor. At this time the leaves of the tree had begun to fall also, and her little brain made a comparison, and she said: "Oh, look, Daddy's shedding his leaves!"—Chicago Tribune.
